If it is decided to proceed with an inquiry, the matter must be referred to a specially constituted Impeachment Committee.

If the report recommends that a President be removed from office, the question must be put to a vote.

A President is removed from office if two thirds of members of the Assembly support the recommendation.

Impeachment Committee investigates, establishes the veracity (and, where required, the seriousness) of the charges against a President and makes a recommendation to the NA.

House schedules report for debate and decision at a House sitting, with due urgency.

If the report recommends that a President be removed from office, the question must be put to a vote.

A President is removed from office if two thirds of members of the Assembly support the recommendation.
